in recent years studies in the eschatology and ethics of jesus have provoked an unusual interest among bible students when talking about the coming of the kingdom did jesus mean that there would be a divine intervention or a catastrophe if so were his ethical teachings intended for an emergency situation interim ethics this book provides an admirable introduction to eschatology in general dr wilder argues for an interpretation of the evidence that maintains the full significance of jesus that his eschatology far from being a liability represents a true disclosure of human destiny and that there is no contradiction between it and his ethical principles which are of permanent validity since the 1960s biblical scholars have noted a relationship between eschatology and ethics in luke acts but to date there has been no substantive study of the relationship between these themes what shall we do offers such a study lear observes and develops a logic that luke acts presents that begins with eschatological expectation and ends with a particular pattern of life especially with regard to possessions he makes the bold claim that luke has not given up on eschatological expectation the healing of the cripple acts 3 cornelius s conversion acts 10 and the shipwreck narrative acts 27 28 are figurative stories of coming eschatological salvation in this context lear demonstrates that the sharing of possessions becomes the means by which a new eschatological people is formed at the beginning of luke s gospel john the baptist says the true children of abraham will escape the coming judgment because they share their possessions the logic of this claim is worked out throughout luke s two volumes culminating in barbarian maltans becoming children of abraham because they hospitably receive the apostle paul a major concern for christian theology is the tension created by the already and not yet aspects of christian eschatology this study seeks to characterize the nature of that tension as it has been interpreted in the biblical materials and in selected representatives of the history of christian theology the study then suggests the implications of eschatological tension for a christian approach to a public ethic i e an ethic for a pluralistic natural community carl braaten has written an interesting book applying the eschatological perspective to different dimensions of the christian faith of the life of the church and of christian ethics his extremely readable style leads to profound insight i particularly like the chapter on the ministry and the wisdom of his reflections on ethical questions wolhart pannenbergs university of munich more than any other theologian today braaten successfully relates biblical faith and ethics to the whole spectrum of urgent current concerns richard h hiers dept of religion university of florida braaten rightly insists that the church has lost its eschatological bite and he does much toward recovering that loss gerhard o forde luther theological seminary st paul minnesota this book continues braaten s persistent effort to interpret vital human concerns by the promise that the lord lives robert w jenson lutheran theological seminary gettysburg pennsylvania this book develops a thorough account of the sphere of human moral action in sustained dialogue with jürgen moltmann by examining god s role as promise giver particularly in the christian understanding of resurrection this work describes the occupancy of both history and space in moral terms this leads to an understanding of jesus description of the kingdom of god to feature prominently in describing both the possibility and content of human moral action by offering an account of each of the main doctrines found in moltmann s corpus the role of the future the trinity the holy spirit and anthropology this book locates how each contributes to the understanding of ethics from a christian perspective and subsequently applies these findings to the contemporary issue of poverty and global economics this study examines the influence of john calvin in ethics eschatology and education as well as those influences that affected him it examines his writings to determine if his vision made him an innovator

the research searched for reforms in the areas of ethics curriculum understanding of the teaching office and universal education it also looked at philosophy economics and labor a belief in the after life and end times was an ethical motivation for calvin and education was a means by which the people that he worked with and wrote to could understand how they should live and why they should live like that thus there is an important connection among ethics eschatology and education all people were to work to their potential at their job because in doing their job they would honor god teachers were especially important those who taught would affect the quality of education calvin worked to provide teacher training and support he believed that all occupations could be a special calling from god and education was a means to prepare the young person for his or her calling schools existed in geneva before calvin arrived in 1536 however they did not function in the way that calvin would have liked calvin provided the elementary students with a needed text when he prepared a catechism the students had written material that they could read and study and a systematic presentation of the basic doctrines of the christian faith calvin also wanted more appropriate facilities in which the students could learn although his organization of the schools improved the atmosphere for learning the building of the academy was his dream and became his major educational achievement in the city of geneva because 16th century students needed to be prepared for the new world there was a need for curriculum change the students were required to read many of the prominent greek and roman authors in the ancient languages but the student learned theology hebrew poetry dialectic and rhetoric physics and mathematics as well calvin wished to graduate a well rounded scholar who could take his or her place in society in this way the citizens of geneva and all those of the reformed belief would be better prepared for life on earth and the after life the role of the spirit in the eschatological ethics of revelation was a topic that has given me great joy to learn the book of revelation the role of the spirit eschatological and ethics in this book i have discovered the plan of salvation which was laid before the foundation of the world in a very clear manner god the master of the universe revealed to john the final story of this worlds history at the isles of patmos the trinity is well explained and even their duties as the godhead god the father god the son and god the holy ghost of which my dissertation is looking at the office or the role of the spirit in the second coming of christ from genesis to malachi it is god the father who revealed himself to mankind and from matthew to acts 1 8 it is god the son who came in person to reveal god the father and from acts 1 9 to revelation it is god the holy spirit who will teach us all that god the son could not finish teaching us the script is divided into five chapters which are the orientation into the book of revelation the theology and the ethics of the book revelation the eschatology ethics in revelation the holy spirit in revelation and the role of the spirit and eschatology ethics of revelation which is the theme of this script then we have the conclusion of the script this incisive study concerns the ways in which theological claims about creation s original and final perfection shape social ethics schuurman argues that prominent 20th century theologians emil brunner and jurgen moltmann wrongly envision the eschaton as radically discontinuous with creation and that this discontinuity coheres with serious inadequacies in their social ethics his thesis is that continuity between creation and eschaton is necessary if christian social ethics is to avoid dualistic understandings of love and justice personal and impersonal values church and world revolutionism and conservatism schuurman establishes theological groundwork for a social ethic that calls for continuous transformation of social institutions and structures the eschatological and dualistic symbolism of the early christians has misled us into thinking that the gospel in its classic period has no concern with what we call social change writes wilder saint paul s apparently conservative social views must be understood in light of his expectation of christ s imminent return his is an emergency ethic but going beyond paul s explicit social teachings to his kerygmatic affirmations we see that the principalities and powers over which christ has triumphed also refer to the corrupted structures of society the social ethical significance of the kerygma becomes discernible as soon as we learn to interpret the mythological expressions of the new testament in historical terms does matter matter the scientific picture of the end of the physical universe has undergone dramatic changes since the turn of the 21st century with its future characterized by accelerated expansion and futility yet christian theology has been largely silent on this despite the interest in eschatology in popular culture and in theology itself what can christian theology learn from and contribute to the scientific picture of the future of the universe can the biblical narratives of creation and new creation have a fruitful dialogue with scientific discoveries david wilkinson shows what a fruitful dialogue this can be critiquing the folk eschatology of the left behind series the misguided faith of the scientific optimists and the lack of scientific engagement of the theologians of hope wilkinson argues for a rediscovery of the theological theme of new creation and the centrality of bodily resurrection

this study investigates the relationship between eschatology and ethics in luke acts scholars have frequently noted an apparent relationship between these two themes but none have traced the themes and their relationship throughout luke s two volumes both of luke s volumes begin with an emphasis on eschatology and ethics john the baptist announces the imminent day of judgment when the crowds ask what they should do he exhorts them to share their possessions peter announces that pentecost signifies the last days when the people ask what they should do he exhorts them to be baptized luke then recounts how they all shared their possessions two objectives drive the analysis of luke acts the first is to investigate whether luke demonstrates an emphasis on eschatology and ethics not only at the beginning of his two volumes but throughout them after considering the travel narrative in luke s gospel and the mission to the gentiles in the book of acts in addition to the beginning of these t w o volumes this study concludes that luke does indeed relate these two themes the second objective is to ask why luke brings these two themes together this study resists an attempt to find a systematic reductive reason why luke relates eschatology and ethics but finds that at least part of the connective tissue between these two themes is the making ready of a people prepared for the lord lk 1 17
