the traditions and institutions that we call religions abound with references to the supernatural ancestral spirits karma the afterlife miracles revelation deities etc how are students of religion to approach the behaviors doctrines and beliefs that refer to such phenomena which by their very nature are supposed to defy the methods of empirical research and the theories of historical scholarship that is the question of methodological naturalism the question of methodological naturalism offers ten thoughtful engagements with that perennial question for the academic study of religion contributors include established senior scholars and newer voices propounding a range of perspectives resulting in both surprising points of convergence and irreconcilable differences in how our shared discipline should be conceptualized and practiced one of the most pervasive and persistent questions in philosophy is the relationship between the natural sciences and traditional philosophical categories such as metaphysics epistemology and the mind contemporary philosophical naturalism and its implications is a unique and valuable contribution to the literature on this issue it brings together a remarkable collection of highly regarded experts in the field along with some young theorists providing a fresh perspective this book is noteworthy for bringing together committed philosophical naturalists with one notable and provocative exception thus diverging from the growing trend towards anti naturalism the book consists of four sections the first deals with the metaphysical implications of naturalism in which two contributors present radically different perspectives the second attempts to reconcile reasons and forward looking goals with blind darwinian natural selection the third tackles various problems in epistemology ranging from meaning to natural kinds to concept learning the final section includes three papers each addressing a specific feature of the human mind its uniqueness its representational capacity and its morality in this way the book explores the important implications of the post darwinian scientific world view in this volume a group of scholars from moral philosophy epistemology metaphysics and the history of philosophy explore the ideas of nature and naturalism as they occur in the celebrated responses to scepticism offered by david hume ludwig wittgenstein and p f strawson philosophers have long been puzzled by the fact that each of these figures approaches scepticism by emphasising certain general facts about human nature there has also been a debate over how these philosophers discussions of scepticism were shaped by their wider views on naturalism as a philosophical orientation that prioritises the natural sciences this is the first volume to offer a comprehensive and comparative exploration of the guiding themes of scepticism and naturalism in the work of these three great figures when if ever is it permissible to afford special consideration to friends and family how can we strive to be objective in our thinking and is this always a feasible or appropriate aim this book examines the categories of impartiality and objectivity by showing how they frame certain debates in epistemology moral psychology and metaethics arguing that many traditional conceptions of objectivity fail to capture what is important to our identities as knowers social beings and moral agents a new thesis of perspectival realism is offered as a critique of strong objectivity but in a way that avoids radical subjectivism or relativism locally situated identities can provide their own criteria of epistemic and moral justification and we may aspire to be impartial in a way that need not sacrifice particular perspectives and relationships arguments throughout the book draw heavily on resources from classical chinese philosophy and significant attention is given to applications of arguments to concrete issues in applied ethics cross cultural anthropology and political science this volume concerns philosophical issues that arise from the practice of anthropology and sociology the essays cover a wide range of issues including traditional questions in the philosophy of social science as well as those specific to these disciplines authors attend to the historical development of the current debates and set the stage for future work comprehensive survey of philosophical issues in anthropology and sociology historical discussion of important debates applications to current research in anthropology and sociology bridging sociology legal and social theory and moral philosophy this volume explores the significance of philip selznick s work in a variety of social contexts particularly the search for responsive law and governance humane institutions and a balance between freedom and communal life
